Recollections Are Stirred When The Work-Day Is Short

When a man is toted to business at noon each day, in a hired cab, after having driven his own car for more than 30 years, he sees and thinks things that escaped him when he was his own chauffeur. It is on the order of the "Recollections of a Man at 80," by William Dean Howells, who wrote that when, at that ripe old age, he went to walk over old accustomed paths he came across hills that were never there before.

The path of the taxi takes us each day past the mansion of Vince Cunningham's boss, Mr. M. B. Curtis, Chairman of the Board of the Collins & Aikman Corporation, at the corner of St. Asaph's Road and Belmont Avenue. Many years ago, when C. & A. were only a small fraction of their present size, Mr. Curtis telephoned this (at that time) young man every Friday afternoon and gave him substantial chemical orders. This went on for a number of months and on one memorable occasion Mr. Curtis invited the order-taker to have dinner with him. That was quite a thrill, as it was the time of life when the neophyte hardly knew at which end of the breakfast to eat the fruit.

The dinner occurred at the old Bingham House, located where the Earle Theater now is, and in the later conversation on the balcony Mr. Curtis said he had imposing plans for the future development of his business and he was impressed that his chemical man could qualify as his right arm. The matter of money was not important, as he would pay what was asked, but the job was turned down on the score that the younger man claimed he had no aptitude for mill work nor had he any particular desire to acquire it.

Mr. Curtis' plans came to full bloom, the largest organization of its kind in the world, with the stock on the Big Board, and now the reflection is what kind of different life would it have been if the opportunity had been seized and made the most of. It is also pertinent to the story that your reporter was in the mill business on his own within six months after telling Mr. Curtis that his sort of industry was not for him, which proves again that you can't always sometimes tell.

* * *

The Saturday Evening Post has printed, within the last few weeks, two articles pertaining to Cartier's, the world-famed jewelers of Paris and New York. There is $800 worth of ornate finery from that great store which girds this wrist, but you can be sure no such investment came as the result of personal initiative.

Refugees of a particularly fine sort from Budapest thought this reporter had been helpful to their American plans and they insisted on doing something about it. Their appreciation took the form of a solid gold lighter and a solid gold cigarette case, very precious and costly gifts, but there was as much use for them here as there would be for a hole in the head, as Freda Schrepfer might say.

These distinctive articles came from Cartier's and to Cartier's they had to go back, which was agreeable. One does not see any merchandise as he enters the sumptuous reception room of this exclusive place on Fifth Avenue, but only a corps of fine-looking men wearing $150 suits. One of them was alert for the visitor and he very courteously suggested than an exchange might be made for a watch. As the old watch was more than 30 years old, the idea was acceptable and then the march was made to the watch department, where this unusual time-piece was selected by payment of an extra $18.

At the same time a peep was had of that $600,000 string of pearls, but no quick thought came as to what lady in Narberth might want it. Could it be that there was some one for whom it could have been secured and was your reporter guilty of a gross absent-mindedness for not remembering it at the time? Could be!

Some one apparently wants to start something. This department made a reference to Stephen Foster as Pennsylvania's greatest citizen. Now comes word that Eleanor Roosevelt is the greatest woman ever born in America. What is your pleasure on the nomination?

Chairman of the committee in charge of the services is Reginald Rollins, a past commander of the post. He is assisted by Philip Cappalonga, head of the parade committee; Warren O'Sullivan and James McCutcheon.

Sunday, a special Memorial Day service will be held at the Narberth Presbyterian Church at 11 A. M. Members of the Speakman Post will attend in a body.

Saturday, the Legionnaires will follow their annual custom of placing wreaths on the graves of war veterans in nearby cemeteries.

Property Owners Debate Zoning Change

Montgomery Ave. Residents Want Commercial Area

Opponents See Danger to Borough if Business Is Extended

Charging that 11 property owners along Montgomery Ave., Narberth, were acting as buffers between residential Narberth and a commercial area across the street in Lower Merion Township, a group of the affected residents petitioned Borough Council May 14 to change the zoning of their properties from R-3 and R-4 residential to C-commercial.

The public hearing was conducted by Sterling M. Chain, chairman of the Building Committee of Borough Council.

Led by Benjamin Ludlow, the petitioners pointed out that the business area across the way had depreciated their properties to such an extent that they were no longer valuable as residences.

They asked the change because without it they couldn't sell their properties, and at the same time they pointed out that such a move would bring in increased revenue to the borough because assessments are higher in commercial than residential areas.

The property in question includes the R-3 section on Montgomery Ave. between N. Narberth and Price Aves., and the R-4 section between Price and Iona Aves. The area is directly across from commercial establishments including shops, gas stations and a food market on the Lower Merion side of the street.

Pointing out the high prices paid for properties on the commercial side of Montgomery Ave. in Lower Merion, Ludlow called on Patrick McSorley, of 419 N. Narberth Ave., whose property also runs along Montgomery. McSorley said he had been trying to sell his property for the past year but that no one was interested in it for other than commercial purposes.

Ludlow said that the affected residents not only couldn't sell their homes under the present zoning, but that because of the unfortunate location of the properties, thetir owners couldn't even get rents commensurate with the high rents of today.

"And when the great pressure for housing is over," he said, "they won't even be able to get the low rents they're getting now."

He also pointed out the inconsistency of zoning Montgomery Ave. commercial from Woodbine to Iona Aves., when there was no corresponding business area on the Lower Merion side, and then at the point where Lower Merion has its most active commercial area, keeping the Narberth side residential.

Borough residents opposing the request for the zoning change pointed out that the majority of the petitioners knew what they

Group Discusses Agreement Act

L-M Women Voters Hear Dr. Northrop

A discussion of the Reciprocal Trade Agreement Act was presented at a meeting of the Lower Merion Township League of Women Voters held May 19.

The discussion was presented by Dr. Mildred Northrop, professor of Economics at Bryn Mawr College. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Herbert J. Painter, 601 Ballytore Rd., Wynnewood, and was presided over by Mrs. Enos J. Derham, of Bryn Mawr, who is chairman of Economic Welfare of the League.

Dr. Northrop reviewed the history of tariff-making prior to the passage of this Act in 1934, when all tariffs were passed by Congress to accompaniment of log-rolling tactics, in order to protect the local and sectional interests of the various congressmen.

Dr. Northrop also outlined the part played by the United States in setting up an International Trade Organization under the U. N. and stated that the Charter for this Organization is now ready to be ratified by the various nations wishing to join. One of the principal objects of the I.T.O. is to encourage the reduction of trade barriers by negotiation among the member nations. According to Dr. Northrop, if the United States should fail to renew the Reciprocal Trade Agreement Act, it would appear to other nations that the United States was unwilling to put these principles into practice.

Expect More Than 700 Entries In Bryn Mawr Kennel Show

An entry of more than 700 dogs at the 28th annual show of the Bryn Mawr Kennel Club, Saturday June 19, is forecast by Dr. Mervyn Ross Taylor, club president. As in former years the show will be held at the Community Playground, Narberth, for the benefit of the Volunteer Medical Service Corps of Narberth. Entries close June 7.

More than 40 specialty clubs are supporting this colorful outdoor show with entries and trophies. Two clubs, the English Cocker Spaniel Club of America, and the Dandie Dinmont Terrier Club of America, are holding their breed specialty shows in conjunction with the Bryn Mawr Club event. This will be the first specialty show of the English Cocker Spaniel Club in a number of years.

In addition to prizes and trophies offered by the breed specialty club, the Bryn Mawr Kennel Club is offering cash prizes for best of breed winners and to first, second and third place winners in class competition.

A large entry in the Obedience Trial Classes is anticipated, as in former years.

Among the judges will be E. Shippen Willing, Bryn Mawr, English Cockers (specialty show); Mrs. Russell S. Boles, Narberth, German Shepherds; and Mrs. Lida P. Delmont, Wynnewood, Chihuahuas, Griffons, Maltese, Miniature Pinschers, Pomeranians.

Officers of the Bryn Mawr Kennel Club include Dr. Mervyn Ross Taylor, president; C. Ross Hamilton, vice-president, Frank S. Young, secretary-treasurer.

The ladies of the Volunteer Medical Service Corps of Narberth will serve luncheon in the Community Building.

Local Man Dies Following Crash

Roger J. Braun, 36, operator of the Last Straw Restaurant, Haverford, died late Sunday night at Bryn Mawr Hospital from injuries received in a collision Saturday between his jeep and an automobile at Haverford Rd., and College Ave., Haverford.

Richard A. Kerns, 3d, of 37 E. Montgomery Ave., Ardmore driver of the car, was held under $500 bail Monday morning by Magistrate Roy Blackburn for action of Montgomery County Coroner Winslow J. Rushong.

According to Haverford Township Police the accident occurred when Kerns, who was driving east on Haverford Rd., hit Braun's jeep as he crossed College Ave.

Braun was thrown 15 feet in the air and hurled against a pole at the southwest corner of the intersection.

Kern's car was overturned and he was pinned beneath it but escaped serious injury. Two passengers in the car, Richard A. Calhoun, 21, of 337 Inwood Rd., Ardmore and John Koser, 18, of 126 Llanfair Rd., Ardmore were treated at Bryn Mawr Hospital for minor injuries.

According to Kerns he had the green light and did not see Braun's jeep until it was in front of him. Braun was alone in the jeep.

Braun who started the Last Straw, eight years ago, was born in Philadelpiha. He had been making his home on the estate of Lewis Henry Esler, Tunbridge Rd., Haverford.

Funeral services will be held today from the Andrew J. Bair Funeral Home, and interment will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Braun is survived by his mother, Mrs. Louise Braun; three brothers, Wilder J. Braun, Carl Braun and David Braun, all of Philadelphia and by a sister, Mrs. James Hake, of Lansdowne.

Speakers Call World Government Realistic Road to World Peace

Advocacy of a strong United Nations having a monopoly of armed force was termed "the only realistic U. S. foreign policy" by the three speakers who took part in Wednesday night's world government forum, held at Lower Merion High School. The talks and the discussion period, moderated by Melvin K. Whiteleather of the Evening Bulletin, served to clarify the position of the Overbrook-Merion chapter of United World Federalists, the meeting sponsors, on a number of important points.

Eric Johnson, headmaster-elect of the Friends Central School and the main speaker, said that the American people want a reasonable and hopeful alternative to the present costly and dangerous world power struggle. Such an alternative would be: 1) a clear statement that America's goal was to have the UN become a limited world government; 2) big and little power talks as to how to achieve that goal; 3) a review conference to consider the necessary amendments to the UN charter.

Johnson stressed his belief that such a statement by President Truman would give the world a clear idea of what America's goal was in terms more explicit than "world peace."

Dr. John H. Arnett, former UWF state chairman, thought there was a good chance that the Russians might agree to make the UN a world government. After pointing out the positive advantages which the Russians and all participants would enjoy he said that if the Russians opposed a fair proposition which almost all the other nations agreed to they could not disguise their real motives.

Taking a leaf from U. S. history, Dr. Arnett pointed out that when the American states were sovereign and independent under the Articles of Confederation they engaged in the same intense rivalry for position which prevented any substan-
